GOVERNMENTAL NEWS

State-specific information detailed in the following section was obtained in large part with the cooperation of SHPOs across the country. Responding to questionnaires sent to over 50 SHPOs, these state offices have enabled us to relate to our readers pertinent information regarding legislation and events in their respective regions of the country. The Grapevine wishes to express our gratitude to those state offices who took the time to participate in this endeavor. The reporting of this news will continue in a timely fashion, and as we receive more and updated information.

Alaska

This year the State of Alaska will celebrate Archaeology Week March 29th - April 4th. For information regarding scheduled activities contact Susan Morton, National Park Service, 2525 Gambell, Anchorage, AK 99503. ☎ 907-257-2559.

Currently, Alaska has pending legislation regarding the disposition of human remains recovered during archaeological investigations. Also pending is a bill to combine two citizen review boards for history and historic preservation. Details regarding the disposition of these bills will be forthcoming as soon as information is available.

Arkansas

During the past year Arkansas passed a new burial protection law. Details regarding this legislation and future proposed historic preservation legislation will be published as information is available.

The Arkansas Archeological Society is organizing the 1992 Archaeology Week in Arkansas April 4-11. For further information or a calendar of events contact: The Arkansas Archeological Society, PO Box 1249, Fayetteville, AR 72702-1249. ☎ 501-575-3556.

Florida

The Florida Trust Award for "Historic Landscape/Archaeology" was awarded to the C.A.R.L. program Archaeological Survey. The C.A.R.L. (Conservation And Recreation Lands) program, established in November 1989, is staffed by Brent Weisman (Project Director) and Christine Newman (Archaeologist), who inventory and evaluate archaeological and historical resources on lands purchased through the state-wide Conservation and Recreation Lands program. C.A.R.L. is part of the Bureau of Archaeological Research in the Division of Historical Resources.

The Florida Archaeological Council Newsletter publishes a series of articles on worker's benefits. These articles are based on a state-wide survey conducted by the Professionalism Task Force. These educational and informative articles are aimed at individuals just entering the field, who are self-employed, or who work as free lance labor.

The first article in the series, which was discussed in the December issue of The Grapevine, outlined the series and focused on pay scales and worker's compensation. The December 1991 issue of FAC Newsletter featured the second article in the series, focusing on health insurance. Results of the survey indicated that most Florida archaeologists lack basic benefits like worker's compensation, health insurance and retirement plans. Prepared by Karen Austin, National Director, Disability Management, Conservco, Inc., the latest article provides a wealth of information on health insurance. Options for health insurance plans are discussed, as well as defining need-to-know terminology of the insurance industry.

If health insurance options concern or confuse you, consider obtaining a copy of this article. Copies are limited, but interested individuals should contact: FAC, PO Box 919, St. Petersburg, FL 33731, Attn: Bob Austin.

Maine

Maine has recently amended an Act to Preserve Maine's Archaeological Heritage. The amendment modifies the act to include a penalty for sale of illegally-collected artifacts.

PRINTED ON RECYCLED PAPER

New Mexico

The New Mexico SHPO periodically offers one-day workshops on § Section 106 compliance. While none are scheduled at the time, anyone wanting to have their name placed on a notification list should contact Lynne Sebastian, Historic Preservation Division, 228 East Palace Avenue, Santa Fe, NM 87110. ☎ 505-827-6320.

Ohio

The Ohio Preservation Act (HB247) is currently in the State Government Committee of Ohio's House of Representatives. This bill includes a state-level review process similar to § Section 106; allows counties/townships to enact historic preservation legislation; clarifies historic easement provisions; codifies SHPO responsibilities; and directs review of building codes. Movement on this bill is expected in early spring of 1992.

Oregon

Oregon is currently revising all its CRM laws. According to Dr. Leland Gilsen, archeologist with the SHPO, this two-year proposed process is too preliminary to supply further information at this time. Also under consideration is a revamp of administration rules for archaeological permits and rules for state tax exemptions for historic properties.

Rhode Island

The National Park Service has awarded a $20,000 grant to the Narragansett Indian Tribe to conduct a full survey and inventory of historic properties on the 1,800-acre Narragansett Indian Reservation.

The Rhode Island Historic Preservation Commission holds regularly scheduled meetings the second Wednesday of each month. The meetings, which are open to the public, are held at the Old State House in Providence at 9:30 AM. Individuals planning to attend a monthly meeting are advised to call 277-2678 to verify the schedule.

Texas

April 11-17, 1992 is Texas Archaeology Week. For more information contact: Teddy Lou Stickney, Texas Archeological Society.

Virginia

Regulation VR 390-01-01, Regulations Governing Permits For The Archaeological Removal of Human Remains, went into effect August 14, 1991. A summary of the regulation is as follows:

"This regulation implements the Virginia Antiquities Act § 10.1-2305 of the Code of Virginia, covering permits for archaeological removal of human remains and associated artifacts. It does not change or replace any existing burial or cemetery protection laws and regulations, nor does it implement preceding sections of the Virginia Antiquities Act. This permitting process will affect any person or entities who conduct any type of archaeological field investigation involving the removal of human remains or associated artifacts from any unmarked human burial site. It will also affect any such archaeological investigation conducted as part of a court-approved removal of a cemetery.

The regulation spells out the administrative conditions attached to such permits, the requirements for application and for work conducted under the permit, requirements for public notification and final disposition of human remains following completion of research. Administrative conditions include deadlines for interim and final reports, provision for monitoring by the department and [a] statement that failure to complete the conditions of one permit acceptably may be considered grounds for denying subsequent applications. Also included are the conditions under which extensions of permit will be considered.

The requirements for professional qualifications and nature of research are consistent with federal regulations and those of other states, as well as with the requirements for archaeological work conducted or reviewed under other departmental programs. The public notice process parallels that required for obtaining a court order to remove family cemeteries. It contains further assurances to notify and consult with the Virginia Council on Indians and appropriate tribal groups in cases involving prehistoric and historic Native American graves. The preferred long-term disposition of remains is stated as reburial within two years unless an alternate plan is approved by the department through consultation with key interested parties."

West Virginia

The State of West Virginia has designated May 11-15 as the 1992 Preservation Week. For further information or calendar of events contact: West Virginia Division of Culture & History, Cultural Center, Capitol Complex, Charleston, WV 25305. ☎ 304-348-0240.

CORPORATE PROFILES

At THOMASON & ASSOCIATES we offer the full range of preservation services, from basic architectural inventories to comprehensive preservation plans for cities and counties.

- National Register nominations for cities and counties.
- Design review guidelines.
- Tax act consultation for income-producing properties.
- Preservation advocacy with civic officials, neighborhood groups, the media and developers.
- Cultural resource survey.
- Preservation manuals.
- Preservation education materials.
- Historic preservation ordinances.
- Historic structure reports and architectural analysis.
- Comprehensive preservation planning.

When Thomason & Associates was formed in 1982, we described ourselves as "architectural historians." That term worked well for our first few years. Much of our earliest work involved inventories of historic properties, recommendations for National Register listing, and consultations with local historic preservation commissions.

But over the years historic preservation changed, and so did we. The preservation ethic entered mainstream planning, and our approach at Thomason & Associates became more comprehensive. Today we describe ourselves as "preservation planners." We view preservation as an integral part of overall planning, and we specialize in making historic preservation work in the context of growth and development. Increasingly, we create hands-on, practical planning tools such as design review guidelines, land-use plans and zoning ordinances.

At Thomason & Associates, we've always believed in preservation. We've always valued historic structures and the unique communities they comprise. What's more, we've spent nearly a decade helping towns and communities preserve their heritage and build new economies at the same time. At Thomason & Associates, we put preservation to work - both aesthetically and economically. PO Box 121225, Nashville, TN 37212. ☎ 615-383-0227.

COASTAL CAROLINA RESEARCH, INC., is an archaeological research firm with a goal of providing quality in a timely, professional manner. Located in Tarboro, North Carolina, Coastal Carolina Research offers a full range of cultural resource management services including archaeological assessments, data recovery, and National Register nominations. Specific skills offered by the firm include: archival and documentary research, reconnaissance survey, intensive survey, archaeological testing, large-scale excavation, and data analysis and interpretation. Focusing on the Southeast, staff archaeologists have expertise in both historic and prehistoric archaeology. Coastal Carolina Research, Inc., is WBE/DBE certified. Interested parties should contact Loretta Lautzenheiser at 310 E. Baker Street, Tarboro, NC 27886, ☎ 919-641-1444.

ALPINE ARCHAEOLOGICAL CONSULTANTS, INC., is a cultural resource consulting firm serving clients managing or developing lands where cultural resource studies are required by federal or state historic preservation legislation. The firm was incorporated in 1987 by Susan M. Chandler, MA, Jonathan C. Horn, MA, and Alan D. Reed, MA. Chandler and Reed are primarily prehistorians, whereas Horn specializes in historical archaeology. Alpine is located in Montrose, Colorado, a small town in west-central Colorado, in the mesa and canyon country of the Colorado Plateau. Like much of the western United States, Montrose is surrounded by a high percentage of public lands. Consequently, Alpine has the opportunity to work on diverse development projects, in numerous environmental settings, investigating a wide variety of prehistoric groups and historical themes. Most of Alpine's work is conducted in Colorado, Utah, northern New Mexico, and southwestern Wyoming.

Alpine's staff is sufficiently large to handle both small- and large-scale projects in a timely fashion. In addition to its three principals, the firm maintains a staff of four MA-level archaeologists as well as a small laboratory and clerical staff. The roster, of course, swells considerably during the field

READER PROFILES

The response to the Corporate Profiles has been so great that profiles have been limited to three per issue. Selections for this issue were based on regional diversity; a pattern The Grapevine plans to maintain in future issues. Since the publication of corporate profiles has been protracted, the deadline for receipt of profiles also has been extended. Any corporate subscriber wishing to be included should submit a 200-word profile by April 10th.
