Are you familiar with the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (ISTEA) of 1991? This legislation provides over $155 billion in transportation funding during the next five years and gives unprecedented responsibility and flexibility to state and local transportation officials for the allocation of these funds. Kansas is leading the way in development of plans to use these funds. The Kansas Department of Transportation (KDOT) has developed an enhancement program that is divided into three equal categories; historic, scenic and environmental, and pedestrian and bicycle facilities. The program, which is open to the public on a competitive basis, is overseen jointly by KDOT and the Kansas State Historical Society.

STATE NEWS

Alaska

The City of Seward has become a Certified Local Government (CLG). As of May 18, 1992, the city is eligible to apply for federal program funding through Alaska's Office of History and Archaeology (OHA). The city has already received its first grant to begin work on a local preservation plan.

A recent issue of Heritage, a newsletter published by the Office of History and Archaeology (OHA), stated that OHA currently maintains a list of archaeologists, architects, historians, and photographers interested in contracting with federal and state agencies, Certified Local Governments, or private historic preservation projects. The list is provided upon request with no endorsements. OHA is currently updating the list for 1993. Anyone wishing to be included on this list should send their name, mailing address, telephone and FAX numbers, and area of expertise to:

Alaska Division of Parks and Outdoor Recreation
Office of History and Archaeology
PO Box 107001
Anchorage, AK 99510-7001

The New Mexico Cultural Properties Act has instituted a "cultural properties committee." The committee meets every other month to consider proposals to list properties on the State Register of Cultural Properties and nominate them to the National Register of Historic Places and to consider application for archaeological permits for state lands, rehabilitation proposals for the state tax credit program, and numerous other preservation-related issues. Appointed by the governor, the committee consists of Dr. Phillip H. Shelley (Chairman, archaeologist), Edith Cherry (architect), Gary Mathews (architect), Albert H. Schroeder (archaeologist), Dr. Edward Staski (historical archaeologist), Robert J. Torrez (State Historian), and Dale Zinn (architect & planner).

The committee assists the New Mexico Historic Preservation Division by offering technical assistance or expertise to local, state, and federal agencies. They also help with decisions about its grants and publication programs and help identify appropriate recipients for the New Mexico Heritage Preservation Awards.

Ohio

How to Complete the Ohio Historic Inventory, by Stephen C. Gordon, is a recent publication by the Ohio Historic Preservation Office. The 224-page handbook includes chapters on identifying historic properties, completing Ohio Historic Inventory forms, and understanding terminology. Other sections include: Ohio architecture styles from the early 19th century to 1990s, traditional Ohio building types, engineering and industrial structures, and the Ohio Historic Landscapes Survey. Sample inventory forms, a bibliography, and an index also are included. This publication is a must for professionals and interested individuals alike. The handbook is available for $14.95 + $2.50 S&H from:

Sales Offices
Ohio Historical Society
Ohio Historical Center
1983 Velma Avenue
Columbus, OH 43211-2497, or call 614-296-2414.

Alliance and Cincinnati join 13 other Ohio communities as Certified Local Governments. While Cincinnati has an active and well-established preservation program resulting from 1980 legislation, Alliance was certified this year just six months after passing its historic preservation ordinance.

Oklahoma

Oklahoma's new Local Development Act was recently passed. This act is a tax-increment financing bill, designed to stimulate investment in economically distressed communities. While similar to acts in other states, Jim Norton (president of Downtown Tulsa Unlimited) states that Oklahoma's new Local Development Act differs in that "it provides the ability to have rehab expenses qualify as an eligible project cost." The act creates reinvestment areas, historic preservation areas, and enterprise areas and abates ad valorem taxes, sales taxes, and other local taxes for select projects.

Utah

In light of the new Utah Antiquities Protection Act, which went into effect this year, a 15-member task force has been formed to make recommendations to the Board of State History. The task force includes five archaeologists, as well as representatives from UDOT, the Department of Natural History, the Board of State History, the Department of Community and Economic Development, the Division of Indian Affairs, and the Utah League of Cities and Towns. The task force has been discussing a number of topics including the permitting process, artifact curation, the role and organization of the Antiquities Section, and archaeology in other state agencies.

The following is a proposal submitted for discussion at the fall meeting of the Utah Professional Archaeological Council. While the proposal was designed for implementation in Utah, The Grapevine asked Ms. Smith's permission to publish her proposal as an example for other states.

THE PROPOSAL FOR ADDRESSING THE NATIVE AMERICAN GRAVES PROTECTION AND REPATRIATION ACT IN UTAH

By Shelley J. Smith, BLM

The Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act (NAGPRA) passed into law November 16, 1990. It stipulates deadlines for two types of inventories of federal collections:

November 16, 1993:

Section 6 (a) "In General -- Each Federal agency or museum which has possession or control over holdings or collections of Native American unassociated funerary objects, sacred objects, or objects of cultural patrimony shall provide a written summary of such objects based on available information held by such agency or museum. the summary shall describe the scope of the collection, kinds of objects included, reference to geographical locations, means and period of acquisition and cultural affiliation, where readily ascertainable."

November 16, 1995:

Section 59(a) "In General -- Each Federal Agency and each museum which has possession or control over holdings or collections of Native American human remains and associated funerary objects shall compile an inventory of such items and, to the extent possible based on information possessed by such museum or Federal agency, identify the geographical and cultural affiliation of such item."

The regulations implementing NAGPRA have not been issued; preliminary draft regulations are lengthy and can be obtained by contacting the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act Program Leader, Archaeological Assistance Division, National Park Service, PO Box 37127, Washington, D.C. 20013-7127. The regulations almost certainly will not be finalized until the first inventory deadline is imminent, if not past.

NAGPRA is an unusually vague law. Responsibility for inventories is ambiguously assigned. Claimants can show lineal descent or cultural affiliation based on folklore and oral traditions, information classes not normally considered judicial evidence. Determining cultural affiliation and lineal descent for claims of human remains and objects will likely be problematic in many cases. The proposed means to resolve disputes and competing claims is vague. In short, NAGPRA presents federal agencies and repositories holding federal collections with an administrative nightmare. It is probably a safe assumption that tribes [Native American] are comparably concerned.

Until the regulations are finalized, it is premature to begin applying lineal descent and cultural affiliation determinations. However, I think that it would be prudent for concerned parties in Utah to begin laying the groundwork for NAGPRA consultation. I propose we form a consortium.

The consortium would consist of representatives from federal agencies, repositories holding federal collections, and concerned tribes. An advantage of this approach is that we avoid the need for each agency and each repository to approach each tribe with the same questions. I think we can avert some chaos and inconsistency through mutual consultation.

The ultimate purpose of this consortium would be to come to a resolution about applying NAGPRA procedures, both for the required consultation and for determining right of possession. The resolution should address existing collections and future situations where NAGPRA would apply.

This proposal will be an agenda item for discussion at the fall UPAC meeting. Ms Smith has agreed to provide a follow-up to her proposal after this meeting.

The first annual Governor's Conference on History and Heritage will be held November 20-21 at the University Park Hotel, in Salt Lake City. Organized by the Utah State Historical Society, the conference will feature sessions, workshops, and exhibits. For further information, contact Debbie Dahl at the Utah State Historical Society, ☎ 801-533-5755.

Virginia

VIRGINIA ARCHAEOLOGICAL SYNTHESIS SERIES

In 1975, the Council of Virginia Archaeologists (COVA) was created as an organization of duly elected professional archaeologists dedicated to the preservation and study of Virginia's archaeological resources. Presently, the organization includes dozens of members from throughout the state. Its primary goals are to foster public awareness, knowledge, and support for the preservation of archaeological resources and to advance such knowledge through the dissemination of information. These goals helped create a series of public symposia which were begun in the fall of 1988. Each symposium was designed to present a synthesis of scientifically derived archaeological data and to provide the current understanding of the particular periods of study. The Archeological Society of Virginia (ASV) agreed to publish each of the complete symposia in their Special Publications Series. Outside funding from the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy enabled the ASV to produce high-quality books.

The Virginia publications were patterned after the highly successful report produced by the North Carolina Division of Archives and History, which resulted from presentations made by David S. Phelps, H. Trawick Ward, Burton L. Purrington, and Joffre L. Coe at a special symposium in 1980. Published in 1983, these papers were edited by Mark A. Mathis and Jeffrey J. Crow and titled, The Prehistory of North Carolina. Probably due to the numerous other prior publications on North Carolina's prehistory, these papers were more general in nature. COVA's approach differed in that more participants were selected so that a broader spectrum of theoretical and methodological approaches would be included. In addition, scholars were chosen because they either were specialists in particular subjects or had a proven publication record. The volumes produced are one of the first series of books dedicated to the prehistory of a single state. Likewise, they bring together baseline data for a more complete understanding of cultural history in Virginia.

Topics of the public symposia have continued through the historic period of Virginia. So far, sessions on the 17th and 18th centuries have been completed. The 17th-century volume is nearly ready to go to press, while the 18th-century edition is still in preparation. The last in the series of symposia, the 19th and 20th-centuries session is planned for late spring, 1993. The Archeological Society of Virginia has extended its offer to include each of these volumes in their Special Publications Series. Virginia now has a set of four published documents chronicling its archaeological prehistory. The historical archaeology volumes are not far behind.

The Archeological Society of Virginia is now offering the four Virginia Prehistory volumes at a special group discount. The regular price per volume is $15. Now, all four volumes can be obtained for only $50, a savings of $10 when purchased separately. Postage and handling remain only $2 per order, whether it is for one book or all four books. To purchase the Virginia Prehistory publications, please send a check or money order, made payable to ASV, to:

West Virginia

In response to the Civil War Battlefields Protection Act of 1991, eleven major Civil War battlefields in West Virginia were surveyed, mapped, and documented by the Historic Preservation Office over the past summer. The project, which was funded by the National Park Service, determined the original state of the areas at the time the battles were fought, the natural environment, existing structures and sites, and troop and gun positions. The battlefields selected for this survey were Philippi, Rich Mountain, Kessler's Cross Lanes, Carnifex Ferry, Cheat Mountain, Greenbrier, Camp Allegheny, Princeton, Droop Mountain, Moorefield, and Summit Point.

READERS' CORNER

The Grapevine encourages comments on any of our articles and invites suggestions on topics for future articles.

The following was provided by Dr. Kenneth C. Carstens, Murray State University, Murray, KY.

SAVAGE CAVE VANDAL PROSECUTED

Terry Chaney of Bowling Green, Kentucky, was prosecuted on September 10, 1992, by the Logan County Attorney on behalf of the State of Kentucky for illegally entering and vandalizing Savage Cave, a nationally significant archeological site near Adairville, Kentucky. Cultural deposits at this archeological site date between 8,000 B.C. and A.D 1000. The site is owned and managed by Murray State University and had been gated, locked, and posted prior to Mr. Chaney's activities. Mr. Chaney was prosecuted under the new Kentucky statute, KRS 433.873, Cave Protection, and also Trespass in the third degree, KRS 511.080. Violation of the Cave Protection statute is a Class A misdemeanor. Vandalizing archeological sites and caves occurring on private, state, or federal property is against the law. Mr. Chaney received a probated jail sentence on the condition that he complete five days community service, was fined $100, and he was ordered to stay away from Savage Cave and any other cave without proper legal authority or permission of the owner. State permits are required in Kentucky to enter and remove any cultural objects from within a cave. For caves on state property, such as Savage Cave, a state antiquity permit is also required (KRS 164.705-164.735), and it is illegal to dig or have in your personal possession any human bones without first being bonded or permitted through the Kentucky Coroner's Act (KRS 311.310-320; 525.120). Mr. Chaney's prosecution represents the first test case of the new Kentucky Cave Protection Act.

The Grapevine received a clipping from the Austin American Statesman newspaper. Listed under "Travel Briefs" was an article on 'a real treasure hunting opportunity ... available through a Florida tour group.' For one week and a fee of $1500, Spanish Main Treasure Company will transport two guest treasure hunters to an area off the East Florida Coast, to dive for gold doubloons and pieces of eight from a Spanish treasure fleet that sank in 1715.

Most assuredly, the concerned reader submitting this clipping wanted to draw our attention to the outrage of this situation and did not offer it as a suggestion for possible vacation plans.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

Barbara Donahue has been named Director for the Archaeological Conservancy's new Midwest regional office, which is located at 5125-b Stoneridge Drive, Columbus, OH 43213.

Ross Fullam, formerly of Heritage Hill State Park, WI, was appointed director of the Historic St. Augustine Preservation Board, St. Augustine, Florida.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL EQUIPMENT FOR SALE OR RENT

ARCHAEOLOGICAL SOIL FLOTATION DEVICE

These flotation devices are perfect for recovering the small artifact, floral and faunal remains that go right through your screens. In use throughout the world, they are built largely of plastic for lightweight durability. They can be operated using any standard garden hose. A single operator can process hundreds of liters of soil per day. The device comes fully assembled and complete with instruction manual, bung tool, one heavy fraction collector, and one light fraction collector. Two sizes are available: 50 gallon ($350.00) and 30 gallon ($350.00) capacity. Also available are a Bucket Flotation System, Finder Probes, and extra heavy & light fraction collectors. For further details and free brochure contact: William Sandy, RR 3, Box 120, Newton, NJ 07860 ☎ 201-383-6355.

CULTURAL RESOURCE ANALYSTS, INC., has an immediate opening for the right archeologist. This job will involve a 1:1 ratio of field to lab time. Applicants must be in top physical condition and will be required to pass a standard physical exam because much of the field work will include archaeological survey in rugged, mountainous areas of eastern Kentucky and southern West Virginia. If you are interested in this position, you must be able to get around in the woods! Considerable field experience and computer literacy are paramount. The opening to be filled is a full-time position with benefits. Interested applicants should send a letter of interest, vitae, and names and addresses of three references to:
