Pennsylvania's 1st Annual Historical Preservation Commendation for Outstanding Achievement in Archaeology

On April 25, 1995, the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission (PHMC) conferred its 1st Annual Historical Preservation Commendation for Outstanding Achievement in Archaeology. The award, presented by Ms. Brenda Barrett, Deputy State Historic Preservation Officer, was given to Dr. Christopher Bergman on behalf of Transcontinental Gas Pipeline Corporation's Sandts Eddy Data Recovery Project in Northampton County, Pennsylvania.

The award ceremony cited the meticulous field and analytical procedures employed during the three-year investigation of this deeply stratified site. Among those in attendance were Ms. Deborah Osborne of the FERC, Dr. Kurt Carr of the PHMC, Mr. William Chamberlain and Mr. Jim Bloemker of Transco, and Sandts Eddy research team members Dr. John Doershuk, Dr. Joseph Schuldenrein, Mr. Philip LaPorta, and Dr. Roger Moeller.

Excavations at Sandts Eddy revealed a deeply stratified sequence of Early Archaic and Middle Archaic horizons. Radio-carbon determinations indicate that the Early Holocene deposits span the time period from 10,150 B.P. to 7070 B.P. A series of occupation floors were excavated, including a significant Middle Archaic level dated between 7330 B.P. and 7070 B.P. The undisturbed nature of this floor allowed for a careful reconstruction of activity areas through point proveniencing of artifacts, as well as refitting and lithic microwear analyses. Due to the quality of preservation of the early prehistoric levels at Sandts Eddy, the site is currently under nomination for the NRHP.

The PHMC is planning to award projects of a similar caliber on a yearly basis. Nominations for the 1996 Archaeological Award are currently being solicited through the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, Bureau for Historic Preservation, 3rd and North Streets, Harrisburg, PA 17120; 717-783-8946. The preliminary deadline for nominations in 1996 is the end of February.

First Annual ACRA Meeting

ACRA, the American Cultural Resources Association, will hold its first annual meeting in Washington, DC, October 7 - 8, at the Governor's House Hotel. Notice is short, but we hope that by providing an opportunity to meet regulatory agency personnel and to network with private firms from across the country, we will attract an enthusiastic group of cultural resources professionals who will then carry our message back home.

ACRA has accomplished a lot for such a young organization, and with the help of our membership we expect to accomplish more in the future. We are providing our members access to reasonably priced Errors and Omissions insurance, we are working on an ethics statement for cultural resources firms, and we have lobbied extensively and successfully on behalf of historic preservation and the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation.

On Saturday, there will be two plenary panel discussions addressing regulatory reform and lobbying. Saturday afternoon, there will be workshops on computerized networking, among other topics. A complimentary cocktail reception will be Saturday evening; and a general membership meeting on Sunday morning to address issues of importance to ACRA's continuing activities and its membership. We will also elect two new board members at that time.

The meeting is scheduled to avoid conflict with running our businesses and to take advantage of lower Saturday air fares. Registration is $85 ($95 for nonmembers) and includes all costs. For nonmembers wishing only to attend the Saturday sessions, the registration is $80. Rooms in the Governor's House Hotel in downtown Washington, not far from the National Trust, have a special rate of $99. There is a $10 reduction in registration price if you postmark your registration before September 1. For information, please contact Tom Wheaton at 770-498-4155, 770-498-3809 (fax), or tomwheaton@aol.com. If you do not receive a meeting announcement in the mail within the week, please call Tom Wheaton to get added to the ACRA mailing list.

Book Review..

African American Historic Places

Edited by Beth L. Savage
The Preservation Press, Washington, D.C.
1994

By Rita Walsh, Gray & Pape, Inc.

This important book is a collaboration of the National Park Service, U.S. Department of the Interior; the Preservation Press, National Trust for Historic Preservation; and the National Conference of State Historic Preservation Officers. Other contributors to the book include Congressman John Lewis; historians, James R. Grossman and James Oliver Horton; and historical archaeologist, Theresa A. Singleton, who wrote four of the eight essays which explore many facets of the historic and cultural context of the African-American experience in this country.

The book centers on the more than 800 properties listed in the National Register of Historic Places which possess significance in African-American history. The properties are located throughout the United States and two U.S. territories, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico. These properties are included in the National Register either as individual listings or within thematic, multiple properties, or historic district nominations. Most of these properties, in line with the majority of National Register listings, are of local or state significance.

The book is composed of several sections, beginning with eight essays, a state-by-state listing of the individual resources, and several indexes. The resources are presented individually through brief narratives based on the information found in the specific National Register nominations. The types of resources and the themes they represent are truly astounding and wide-ranging, documenting the struggles, efforts, and achievements of many individuals and groups. There are many institutional properties, particularly churches and educational institutions, from the antebellum period, a significant number after the Civil War, and many early twentieth century properties. The southern states, which possess more listings than anywhere else in the country, have the expected plantations and slave quarters, but also the residences and businesses places of free blacks during the antebellum period and newly-emancipated slaves just after the Civil War.

The listings also include a number of historic districts throughout the country, although in a number of instances, they are described as "one of the few remaining" or "only remaining." Many individual properties are described similarly, attesting to the past disregard, if not outright demolition, of the areas historically occupied by African Americans.

The book is an excellent model for the presentation of information. It offers many levels of information and various ways of finding it. The numerous indexes to the resources include subject, individuals and organizations, and most striking, by occupation. The concise individual descriptions and longer thematic essays with suggested further reading provide readers many opportunities to find out more (and then more) information about many topics. It is definitely a useful resource to help in the evaluation of other African American cultural resources not yet listed in the National Register.

The only criticism in the book's presentation is the uneven explanation of terms, events, and other subjects at times in the individual listings. But presumably this is due to the kind of information available in the specific National Register nominations.

It is a well-known fact that the tangible history of an area is represented through its extant cultural resources. This book exemplifies this quite vividly.

Australian National University Department Of
Archaeology & Anthropology
Professor Of Archaeology
(Level E1)

Applications are invited from suitably qualified candidates with a distinguished record of research and publication for appointment to the position of Professor of Archaeology in the Department of Archaeology and Anthropology in the Faculties.

The University is seeking a scholar of international standing, with an active research program and a good teaching record in Archaeology, who will provide academic leadership. Regional and topical specialisations are open, but the successful candidate will be expected to engage in and foster development in existing focal areas of student and staff research and to maintain the department's strength in the archaeology of Australia and its region.

Teaching and research in Archaeology within the Department have been actively pursued since 1970, mainly focusing on the prehistory of Australia and its immediate region. Current staff and graduate students undertake research in Australia, East and Southeast Asia, Oceania and South America. The Department offers a broad range of undergraduate courses on regional, theoretical and practical aspects of Archaeology. Undergraduate Archaeology is taught to honours level and a range of postgraduate degrees are offered to PhD level, with a large postgraduate student enrolment from a wide range of international backgrounds. The Department is committed to the highest level of training for its students and to maintaining a position in the forefront of research and teaching in Archaeology.

The Department is multi-streamed and currently has a full-time staff of five archaeologists, eight social/cultural anthropologists and two biological anthropologists.

Candidates must have a commitment to, and demonstrated excellence in, teaching. Administrative aptitude and willingness is important as the appointee will be expected to serve substantial terms as Head of Department on a rotating basis with the Professor of Anthropology.

Contact: Professor F. C. Merlan, Head, Department of Archaeology and Anthropology, telephone: (06) 249 3498, fax: (06) 249 2711. The position is available from January 1996. ### SOLINET Preservation Workshops

Is your institution prepared for a hurricane? Do you know what to do if disaster strikes? The North Carolina Maritime Museum will be hosting two SOLINET preservation workshops in September that can prepare you to deal with these emergency situations. Plan to attend HURRICANE DISASTER PLANNING on Thursday, September 14th. Learn what to do before the storm to increase chances of survival and minimize damage, and what to do after the storm to speed up recovery and minimize losses. Topics to be discussed include the nature of hurricanes, general issues in developing your disaster plan, and making your facility more storm-proof. Conducted by Debi Hacker, Conservation Administrator, Chicora Foundation. The session runs from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

On Friday, September 15th, learn how to plan, organize and execute a disaster plan and salvage operation in our DISASTER RECOVERY workshop. You'll hear an in-depth discussion of disaster preparedness and see demonstrations of various salvage techniques for items such as books, manuscripts, and photos. The workshop will cover a broad range of disasters, from minor emergencies (mold outbreaks, leaky pipes) to full-blown disasters such as fires, floods and hurricanes. The session runs from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and will be conducted by Julie Arnott, Preservation Education Officer, SOLINET.

The cost of each workshop is $85 for SOLINET members and any institution in North Carolina; $90 FEDLINK; $125 non-members. Discounts are offered for individuals signing up for both workshops, and there is a $10 discount for early registration. Contact Steve Eberhardt of SOLINET at 1-800-999-8558 ext 285 for further information or to register.

Southwestern Archaeology On the Web

[Reprint from Arizona Archaeological Council Newsletter July 1995.]

Visit the World-Wide Web

(WWW) Site (Primary Locus) <http://seamonkey.ed.asu.edu/~matthias/swa/> is the "address" for Southwestern Archaeology on the Internet. This WWW site carries archaeological data and current events information for the historic preservation and cultural resources management communities of the American Southwest, the area from Durango, Colorado, to Durango, Mexico, and from Las Vegas, Nevada, to Las Vegas, New Mexico (with a bit of California, Texas, and Chihuahua included.) The Southwestern Archaeology web page organizes text and graphics for the entire Southwest and provides a place for primary data. While this web page contains links to previously established anthropological pages on the WWW, its ultimate purpose is to serve as a noncommercial location and destination for important data, a dense cluster on the information super-highway.

Please Contribute Archaeological Data.

Professional and avocational archaeologists, anthropologists, Native Americans, and all "students of prehistory" may contribute their data to the Southwestern Archaeology web site. You own the data, but the web page provides the public with community access to our intellectual and cultural traditions. All contributions should meet the standards of the Southwestern community for clear, effective communication, appropriateness of subject matter, and cultural sensitivity. Text and sound files may be presented in English, Spanish, or any Southwestern Native American language.

Most of us take photographs, draw and sketch, create computer graphics, or write voluminous texts on word processors. It takes little to scan in a photo or add hyper-text markup language (html)

"tags" to convert your text data for the world-wide web. There is NO COST to run data on the Southwestern Archaeological web page. Limited assistance can be provided to those needing graphical scanning to help with html. To learn the most compatible methods for forwarding your data, send an e-mail message to the Southwestern Archaeology system operator.
