Ten County Survey of Historic National Road Get Underway In Ohio

Norwich, Ohio --- Although historians and seasoned travelers alike have respected the significance of the National Road, now known as U.S. Rt. 40, many of the Ohio properties associated with the nation's first federal highway are yet to be documented for the public.

The Ohio Historic Preservation Office of the Ohio Historical Society (OHS) has received a $68,000 grant through the Ohio Department of Transportation for an 18-month study to survey and document historical structures and sites within a 400-foot corridor along the road in Ohio.

The grant, made through the enhancements program of the federal Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (ISTEA), was announced October 10, 1996, at the society's National Road/Zane Grey Museum in Norwich. The announcement was made during the inaugural meeting of the National Road Association, an interstate advocacy group that fosters and promotes preservation of the road's heritage.

At the meeting, State Historic Preservation Officer Amos J. Loveday, Jr., commented about the survey's importance. "Although many communities along the National Road have conducted historic property surveys in their immediate areas, this is Ohio's first statewide review of such resources associated with the highway. Our survey will be an important step toward preserving and building awareness of this historic transportation corridor."

Construction of the original 600-mile National Road began in 1806 in Cumberland, Maryland, and ended in Vandalia, Illinois, in 1840. In Ohio, 220 miles of the National Road were built through ten counties: Belmont, Buernsey, Muskingum, Licking, Franklin, Madison, Clark, Miami, Montgomery, and Preble.

Due to the popularity of National Road history and the fact that many portions of the road remain intact today, project planners believe that the identification of significant properties associated with the "Main Street of America" will help tourism and economic growth in key communities.

Stephen C. Gordon, OHS survey and National Register manager, is supervising the survey, which will be conducted by the historic preservation consulting firm Gray & Pape, Inc., of Cincinnati. Their work will chronicle the road's history from the time of original construction in Ohio, 1828-1840, to 1950.

Gordon said, "We estimate that 1,000 previously undocumented National Road properties will be added to the Ohio Historic Inventory through the grant project. Hundreds of existing records will be updated, and new photographs will be taken."

To represent the early stages of road construction and use, project consultants will look for work camps and remnants of the ordinal road, stone bridges, mile markers, historical signs, inns and taverns, and commemorative monuments. To document the years of early automobile traffic, records of motels, eateries, service stations, and campgrounds will be made.

Ohioans who have photographs and postcards of the National Road from 1950 and before are encouraged to share photocopies with the project consultants. Contact: Gray & Pape, Inc., 1318 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio 45210-2314; 513-287-7700.

Call for Papers

Middle Atlantic Archaeological Conference (MAAC)

March 7-9, 1997

Ocean City, Maryland

The 26th Annual Meeting of the Middle Atlantic Archaeological Conference will be held at the Sheraton-Fountainbleau Inn and Spa, Ocean City, Maryland, from Friday, March 7th to Sunday, March 9th.

Papers: Individuals or groups who wish to make presentations at the meeting should submit individual papers, posters, or symposium abstracts to the Program Chair no later than November 15, 1996. Abstracts must be typed and submitted on diskette (IBM/Compatible WordPerfect), together with name(s), address(es), phone number(s), paper title, and paper length (10-20 minutes) or display size. Please limit the length of the abstract to 150 words.

Posters: Space will be provided in an exhibit hall for those choosing to share their research in poster form. This poster session will provide an alternative medium for the presentation of data for the edification of and evaluation by the archaeological community. Interested presenters should submit an abstract (as described above) and an estimate of the approximate space required for the display.

Exhibits: The exhibit hall will also be available to any person, group, or company wishing to display and/or sell books or other materials/products of interest to Mid-Atlantic archaeologists. Interested parties should contact the Local Arrangements Chair for further information.

MAAC Guidelines: The Conference has adopted the following rules governing presentations: (1) an individual can present only one paper at the meeting; (2) persons with an unexcused absence from the previous year's meetings cannot present at this year's meeting; (3) all presenters must register for the meeting* and must be members of MAAC, Inc., for 1997.

 The Conference registration fee is waived for first time student presenters. Please inform the Program Chair if you are a first time student presenter.*

Yat Kitischee Project Receives Florida Trust Award

Archaeology was recognized at the recent Florida Trust for Historic Preservation meeting in Orlando when Janus Research, the Board of County Commissioners of Pinellas County, and the Florida Department of Transportation were presented with the Trust's Award for Meritorious Achievement in Preservation Education/Media for the yat Kitischee Public Archaeology Project. The project, which was sponsored by Pinellas County and conducted by Janus Research, included hand-on public participation in an archaeological excavation, site tours, free public lectures, a 300-page report, and a 28-page illustrated booklet. Partial funding for the project was provided by a grant from the Florida Division of Historical Resources. Florida Department of Transportation's Aviation Division provided the funds to purchase the property from a private developer enabling the Manasota-Safety Harbor period midden to be preserved. Project Director, Bob Austin, accepted the award for Janus Research.

Basic SOPA Certification

In a recent issue of the Society of Professional Archeologists (SOPA) Newsletter, Jeannette A. McKenna, SOPA Board ASCA Representative, discusses the revisions to the basic SOPA certification requirements made over the course of the past few years. The reason for the revisions, as Ms. McKenna states, is "to emphasize the 'field' research certification and eliminate the various 'specialized' categories. The rationale behind these revisions follows the argument that ALL archeologists wishing to be considered 'professional archeologists' must be proficient in conducting basic field studies."

The main focus of Ms. McKenna's article is not SOPA membership and certification in SOPA for individuals with advanced degrees from "accredited" institutions, but rather, the article focuses on the issue of home-study advance degree programs "in which students studying entirely at home can earn anything from a bachelor's degree to a doctorate -- all without ever attending a single class or even meeting their instructor face to face." These programs put the profession at risk for they dilute the discipline "by suggesting that self-taught persons with no peer review or accountability be considered on par with the persons who have earned their status through a recognized and accredited institution."

Ms. McKenna singles out California as the state with the highest number of SOPA members and also the state that dominates SOPA's grievance system. Coincidentally, California has a number of institutions that offer home-study degree programs. The article issues a warning to all archaeologists who consider themselves "professionals" to recognize the potential dangers of these home-study programs and to "stress to students, interested groups, etc., the need for formal and accredited scholarship."

National Endowment for the Humanities Appropriation

The National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) received level funding of $110 million for the fiscal year that began October 2, 1996, (i.e., FY-1997) in the huge omnibus spending bill that was negotiated among the White House, the House, and the Senate. Final Congressional action was completed on September 30 and the President signed it before midnight, thus avoiding a shutdown of agencies that fall under the six appropriation domains included in the bill. The bill was necessary because Congressional action, including conferencing, could not be completed before the conclusion of FY-1996.

Senate Omnibus Parks/Lands Bill

Includes Advisory Council,
BLM, Heritage Areas, Parks,
and Many Other Good Measures

On Thursday, October 3, 1996, the Senate approved by unanimous consent H.R. 2436, the omnibus parks and public lands bill. The bill now goes to President Clinton, who has said he will sign it into law.

After much wrangling over the legislation, Senator Frank Murkowski (R-AK), chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, withdrew his objections and allowed the bill to come to the Senate floor in return for administration agreements concerning logging on the Tongass National Forest. (The administration had previously promised a veto of the omnibus bill if it included certain provisions relating to the Tongass logging; those provisions were dropped from the House-passed bill.)

Earlier, Senator Murkowski objected to the Administration's letter on the matter, which was meant to help meet some of his concerns. He indicated that it was not sufficient. Apparently he then met with the top staff in the White House and they were finally able to make a deal that would satisfy his demands.

Note that other controversial provisions from earlier bills — such as increased motorized use of the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness and corporate sponsorship of the National Park System — were dropped by the House before it passed the legislation on Friday. The bill still benefits 113 parks and monuments, creates new historic trails, expands many park boundaries, establishes a number of heritage areas, and reauthorizes the Bureau of Land Management and — of special interest to those following my earlier alerts — reauthorizes the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation.
